1. BRAND ESSENCE — THE LARRIKIN SPIRIT

Outback Run is a love letter to two Australian icons at once: the 1980s Sega arcade racer — all sunset gradients, chrome lettering and impossible speed — and the laid-back outback larrikin who does 140 down the Nullarbor with one elbow out the window and not a care in the world.

The brand never takes itself seriously, but it always looks the goods. Everything is sun-baked, dust-covered and gold-trimmed. If a brand touchpoint wouldn't look right nailed to the wall of a corrugated-iron pub or slapped on the bumper of a dusty ute, it isn't Outback Run.

BRAND PILLARS

Laid-back. No stress, no hurry — even at 280 km/h. Relaxed confidence in every line and layout.

Larrikin. Cheeky, playful, a bit rough around the edges. The kangaroo wears sunnies. Of course he does.

Sun-baked retro. 1986 arcade warmth: sunset gradients, italic chrome type, big skies, red dirt.

Design test: if it could hang in a roadhouse between a flood warning sign and a mounted marlin, it's on brand.

2. THE LOGO

The primary logo is the rainbow script wordmark: "Outback Run" hand-lettered in a bouncy 1980s brush script, filled with five horizontal stripes — blue, cyan, yellow, orange, red — wrapped in a thick white outline with a soft navy drop shadow falling down-right. The kangaroo road-sign diamond dangles off the final letter like a keychain: read the script first, the diamond second.

Primary wordmark on Night Black (game screens, dark apparel) — the white outline is the keyline that keeps the rainbow crisp. Never remove it.

Primary wordmark on Desert Sand (posters, print, packaging).

THE OVAL BADGE

Secondary lockup: the wordmark arched over an oval outback scene — red muscle car, monolith, roo sign, sunset. This is the sticker and pin-badge format; die-cut to the white oval edge.

CONSTRUCTION & CLEAR SPACE

Clear space on all sides equals the cap height of the "O". Minimum width: 40 mm print / 200 px screen. Below that, use the kangaroo diamond alone (favicons, avatars, sticker dots). Stripe order is fixed — blue on top, red at the baseline — and stripes always run horizontal, never angled with the letters.

LOGO RULES

Always reproduce from master artwork; keep the white outline and navy shadow; let the badge die-cut to its oval; place on sand, black, or big-sky photography with a scrim.

Never set the name in any other typeface; recolour or reorder the stripes; remove the white outline; separate the diamond from its keychain string; rotate the wordmark off its natural bounce.

3. COLOUR PALETTE

Every colour is sampled from the game itself — the sky at noon on the Nullarbor, the sunset bands behind the course map, the red centre dirt. Used together they read as "outback arcade" from three metres away.

SWATCH	NAME	HEX	ROLE
	Sunset Gold	#FFD700	Logo highlight, HUD numbers, travelled route line, progress fill
	Sunset Ember	#FFE14D	Gradient top, sun discs, highlight text
	Burnt Orange	#FF9933	Gradient middle, late-afternoon scenes, accents
	Ochre Red	#C23A2E	Gradient base, goal signage, crash text, "don't" rules
	Big Sky Blue	#1898E0	Day skies, sticker backings, secondary merch panels
	Desert Sand	#D9C28F	Map boards, print backgrounds, apparel neutral
	Red Earth	#C17A4B	Red Centre dirt, dust trails, worn textures
	Saddle Brown	#8B4513	UI frames, borders, leather, timber
	Night Black	#1A0F0A	Title screen ground, t-shirt base, type on sand
	Dusk Plum	#2A0820	Sunset gradient top, night scenes

Signature gradient (covers, posters): Dusk Plum → Ochre Red → Burnt Orange → Sunset Ember, top to bottom. The logo rainbow is a separate five-band spec: #2A9AD8 / #4FD8E8 / #FFE14D / #FF9933 / #E8302A, always horizontal, blue on top.

4. TYPOGRAPHY

DISPLAY — "THE SLANT"

FLAT OUT, MATE

Flowing connected brush script with the five-band horizontal rainbow fill, white outline and navy shadow — the voice of the logo. Use the master wordmark wherever possible; for live text (stage banners, headings) use a bold retro script such as Yellowtail or Pacifico, leaning right, never in ALL CAPS.

HUD — "THE SCOREBOARD"

TIME 84 SCORE 000815

Bold monospace with wide letterspacing, Sunset Gold on Night Black. Used for HUD counters, price/label text on merch, captions and spec callouts in print. Equivalent: any monospace at 700 weight, letter-spacing $\geq 0.1\text{em}$.

BODY

Plain humanist sans (Helvetica/Arial) for paragraphs and spec sheets. Keep sentences short and dry — the humour does the work, not the font.

5. KEY ART & MASCOT

Two pieces of key art carry the brand's storytelling. Both are painted in warm 1980s airbrush style with saturated ochres and big skies, and both are trademark-clean for use on any product.

Figure 2 — "The Jump" — a red Aussie muscle car airborne over the dust, a khaki-clad wildlife-warrior type up front pointing down the road, a young blonde woman in khaki in the back hanging onto her hat. Use for posters, loading screens and the game's biggest moments.

ART RULES

Always keep the full compositions intact (they are already colour-matched to the palette); pair with the logo on a darkened band; crop only from the sky.

Never redraw the characters in other styles; remove Skids' sunnies; place text over faces; use the art against cool blue backgrounds — the brand runs warm.

Note for ratings boards and family editions: an alternate take of Figure 1 without the cigarette is recommended for mass-market retail.

6. MERCHANDISE APPLICATIONS

The identity is built to survive print: one wordmark, one diamond, one gradient. It reads on a chest, a bumper or a pub wall from across the car park.

Figure 5 — Poster: A2 matte stock. "The Jump" key art full-bleed with the wordmark locked to the top third. Designed to hang in roadhouses, pubs and panel shops.

7. IN-GAME APPLICATION

The same identity runs through the game itself — the wordmark fronts the title screen, and the HUD, buttons and course map all draw from the palette in section 3.

- Title screen: Night Black ground, wordmark top-centre, never smaller than 40% of screen width.
- HUD: monospace, Sunset Gold on Night Black, letterspaced — scoreboard type only.
- Course map: Desert Sand board, asphalt ribbons, gold route line, chequered junctions.
- Stage banners and crash callouts: display slant, ALL CAPS, Ochre Red or Sunset Gold.
- Nothing in-game uses colours outside the section 3 palette.

8. VOICE & TONE

Outback Run talks like a mate leaning on the bonnet: dry, warm, unhurried, and funny without trying.

Start of a run: "She'll be right. Flat out, mate."

Checkpoint: "Beauty! Keep her pinned."

Crash: "Cop that. Bush mechanics'll fix it."

Finish: "You made it! Bickies are on us."

HOUSE RULES

- Short sentences. Dry delivery. Never shouty marketing copy.
- Aussie slang is seasoning, not the meal — one term per line, max.
- Encourage, never punish: a crash is "cop that", not "you failed".
- The roo is "Skids", always "he", never explained.
- Sign-off for updates and patch notes: — The Outback Run mob
